

Vaporized: Navigating Teenage Trends in Vaping, E-Cigs, and Social Media

How has teenage use of e-cigarettes and vapes changed during COVID-19? How does social media influence the health behaviors of adolescents? Is tobacco use rising or falling?

Join Erin Vogel, PhD, Stanford University, to learn answers to these questions and more. This online session will cover vaping, e-cigarettes, social media, and their effects on teenagers' health and well-being.

Dr. Vogel is a postdoctoral fellow and social psychologist at the Stanford Prevention Research Center. Her research involves adolescent e-cigarette use, smoking in the LGBTQ+ community, and co-occurring health risk behaviors.
